TrekTip

We believe there is a need for a product that empowers people to provide and review feedback on places, cities or regions and present that information in a simple interface such that the information is relevant and immediately consumable. Other sites can be a confusing experience for the user. Users are often presented with information over-load, a plethora of ads and applications which are difficult to navigate/operate. The primary goal of these websites may be to sell products or services (e.g. Flights, Hotels).

TrekTip will provide a platform that is focused on Places, Attractions and User Experience. Information (via Feedback and Ratings) will be expanded and maintained by communities and local experts.

The TrekTip site will be hosted on Google's Cloud Infrastructure providing robust data storage, scalability, faster response, and 99.95% up time. Thus, TrekTip will benefit from the already mature and robust Server Infrastructure that Google has created. We will be positioned to readily serve customers in any part of the world. Moreover, it will have a scalable service, so that our users will not be impacted when the site gains significant traction. This will allow the team to focus solely on developing the best traveling service aid for the user.

TrekTip will motivate and inspire communities to travel, visit and share.
